

A very fine pair of George I cast Candlesticks made in London in 1726 by James Gould.

Sold

Description

The Candlesticks stand on a stepped base with incuse corners. The bases have sunken central wells and rise to octagonal baluster shaped stems decorated with reeding. The spool shaped sockets display a central girdle and both pieces are fully marked in the foot. The candlesticks are in excellent condition and are of a good colour. James Gould was a specialist Candlestick maker of fine quality. His brother, William, was apprentice to him and his masterpiece is recognised as the Knesworth Chandelier in the Fishmongers Company, made in 1752.

Height: 6.5 inches, 16.25cm.

Base Diameter: 4.5 inches, 11.25cm.

Weight: 26oz, the pair.
