Description

The Snuff Box is of broad rectangular form and has slightly incuse corners. The cover displays an outer cast raised border of trailing foliage and flower heads in bloom. This border encloses an exceptionally engraved panel of pluming scrolls and trellis work, around a vacant shield shaped cartouche. The cover also displays exotic birds, as well as a male figure in period costume with hat, dancing, and a woman with a dog looking loyally at her. The female figure is engraved with a face depicting the two ages of woman. The sides are also engraved with crisp pluming scroll and trellis work, as well as an unusual scene on each side including a lake scene with Chinese buildings, a seated monk holding a cross and female figure, a second lake scene with boats and a very unusual panel depicting a male and female figure climbing a mountain. The base is also beautifully decorated with the same pluming scroll work around a shaped rectangular plain panel. This is some of the finest and most unusual engraved work we have ever seen on a Snuff Box. This is not surprising when the makers are considered, as they were making the finest boxes in London at this date.

The interior is very well marked and displays original gilding. The interior of the cover is also engraved with the contemporary inscription:
