

A rare George III Filigree Needle Case. English and made circa 1800.

Sold

Description

This rare piece is cylindrical in form and would have been used to keep needles in, the needles most probably attached to a small piece of felt. This piece is cylindrical in form and is decorated with roundels, with lozenges inside, all containing filigree scroll work. Both the base and the "pull-off" cover is slightly domed and is decorated in the form of a stylised raying flower head, terminating in a ball finial. This piece is in quite excellent condition, has a length of 2.2 inches and a diameter of 0.65 inches.